RAN AWAY from the subscriber, living in Alexandria, a negro boy, of a yellowish complexion, called JOE PAIN, about 16 years of age—had on when he went away a pair of home-spun pantaloons, mixed with blue, black and white, and generally wore them without suspenders tied round his waist with a string :
Likewise, had on a blue cloth roundabout jacket. I think it probable that he may have changed them. He is apt to be impudent when spoken to and speaks very quick. It is supposed he is at present lurking about the navy yard, though he is frequently in Alex-

WINTER ENJOYED.

As I am what the men of the world if they knew such a man, would call a whimsical mortal, I have various sources of pleasure and enjoyment, which are in a manner peculiar to myself, or some here and there such other out-of-the-way person. Such is the peculiar pleasure I take in the season of the winter, more than the rest of the year. This I believe may be partly owing to my misfortunes giving my mind a melancholy cast; but there is something even in the

"Mighty tempest, and the hoary waste
"Abrupt and deep, stretch o'er the buried
"earth,

which raises the mind to a serious sublimity, favorable to every thing great and noble. There is scarcely any earthly object gives me more. I do not know if I should call it pleasure, but something which exalts me, something which enraptures me, than to walk in the sheltered side of the wood, or high plantation, in a cloudy winter day, and hear the stormy wind howling among the trees, and raving over the plain. It is my best season for devotion: my mind is wrapt up in a kind of enthusiasm to HIM, who in the pompous language of the Hebrew bard, "walks on the wings of the winds." In one of these seasons, just after a train of misfortunes, I composed the following:

The wintry west extends his blast,
And hail and rain does blaw;
Or the stormy north sends driving forth
The blinding sleet and snow:

While tumbling brown the burn comes down
And roars frae bank to brae;
And bird and beast in covert rest,
And pass the heartless day.

"The sleeping blast, the sky o'ercast,"
The joyless winter day;
Let others fear, to me more dear
Than all the pride of May.

The tempest's howl, it soothes my soul,
My griefs it seems to join,
The leafless trees, my fancy please,
Their fate resembles mine.

Thou Power Supreme whose mighty scheme
These woes of mine fulfil,
Here, firm, I rest, they must be blest,
Because they are THY will.

Then all I want (O do THOU grant
This one request of mine)
Since to enjoy THOU dost deny,
Assist me to resign. [Burns's Reliques.]

*Dr. YOUNG.

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

REFLECTIONS ON THE STATE OF EUROPE.
UNDER this head, the Connecticut Courant has lately published a series of numbers. The writer concludes the whole with the following pertinent and impressive remarks:

"In the stupendous drama of Europe, which began with the French revolution, almost every succeeding act has produced surprise by its novelty, and has abounded with incidents as terrible as they were unexpected. Both wisdom and folly have been baffled alike in their conjectures respecting the future. In vain has the learned sage explored the pages of history ancient and modern to find some parallel instance that might enable him to conjecture the future from the past. In vain has the shrewd politician, the wily statesman, attempted to lift the veil from futurity, so far as to descry consequences from their causes nicely weighed in this balance. All have been equally puzzled, equally baffled in their theories, equally out in their guesses: and from first to last, it has happened that what occurs to-day affords no means by which to judge of to-morrow.

"We have seen a great and high spirited nation rise in its might and burst the bands of its government. We have seen this nation of 30 millions of people, not only prostrating and sweeping away all its civil institutions, but also waging open war, as it were, against Heaven. We have seen it, in the uproar of anarchy and atheism, covered with crimes the most horrible, and mangle itself by the murder of myriads of its citizens. While thus weltering in its own blood and seemingly in its last agonies, we have seen it spring forward in the paroxysms of rage, bearing down all before it with irresistible might, binding the surrounding nations in fetters, and spreading havoc and ruin far and wide.

"We have seen a young man of no name or family, an adventurer, a foreigner, who had fed upon the bread of public charity—we have seen him step forward, put his bits in the mouth of this furious nation, scourge it with his whip and goad it with his spurs. We have seen thirty millions of people, who generally, neither feared God nor regarded man, who had spurned all laws divine and human; we have seen them, one and all, bend their necks to the yoke of this usurper. We have seen them, all as one man, become the tools of his ambition, a mighty engine in his hands, that has been wielded by him hither and thither at his pleasure. Like the He Goat in the Prophet Daniel, that "touched not the ground" as he went, we have seen this modern Alexander moving in his career of victory with astonishing rapidity, shaking the pillars of every government within his reach, overturning thrones at a single blow, putting down and setting up kings, and still adding nation after nation to the train of his conquests. We have seen moreover a series of incidents remarkably tending, from first to last, to promote his views. All this we have seen already; and what will be the next act in the drama, or what its catastrophe, omniscience alone can foretell.

"The kingdom is the lord's, and he is the governor among the nations. "He sitteth upon the circuit of the Heavens," and "darkness is under his feet." Divine Providence rules and overrules the affairs both of nations and of individuals; and amidst the convulsions, the confusions, and the changes in Europe, it constantly marches forward with unerring wisdom toward the accomplishment of its final purposes. Yet, while we acknowledge with awe, the dispensations of Divine Providence "in staining the pride of human glory and bringing into contempt the honorable of the earth," also while we entertain a firm belief that it will be so ordered by the Disposer of all events, that good will finally grow out of this state of things—we do, in the mean time, not the less detest the instruments of cruelty that are filling the earth with violence and with blood. They "mean not so, neither do their hearts think so." Their aim is not final good or indeed any good to mankind, but to advance their own ambitious views and to gratify their cruel dispositions. And they are to be resisted on the same principle that we would resist and destroy a robber, an assassin, who should attempt to plunder us of our property and to murder our wives and our children. Napoleon's fall may be as sudden as his elevation; or if, for the wise and holy purposes of Divine Providence, his power should be continued and not farther enlarged, there is still a power above, that has fixed his bounds which he cannot pass; a power that is never wanting eventually, to those who duly confide in it, and are not wanting to themselves.

"The signs of the times" are truly awful. The tempest grows louder and yet louder; and in this alarming juncture, it behoves us to bethink ourselves of our own safety. Placed as we are at a great distance from the theatre of general uproar and carnage, and kept, as yet, out of the vortex, we are in this respect in an enviable situation; a situation which we ought to contemplate not without lively gratitude to the Governor of the Universe, nor without heart-felt compassion for our suffering fellow beings. Never had a nation more means of happiness, more urgent calls for patriotism, more frequent or more solemn warnings against internal divisions and dissensions; yet we turn a deaf ear. Instead of uniting like a band of brothers to ward off the blow that threatens us, we are but adding weight to it by violent and acrimonious discord among ourselves. Is this worm at the root, a worm that will never die? Is there no balm that can heal or assuage the wounds which have been made among us by the rancorous spirit of party? Then, our ruin must be inevitable; for a nation, any more than a house, divided against itself, cannot stand. A crisis may arrive, and very soon too, that will give opportunity to some daring usurper to fix his foot upon our necks.

"My fellow citizens, of whatever political party we have been or are, let this be our general motto, For God and our Country. Let us beware of that moral poison, or of those infidel, atheistical principles and practices, which first opened the gate to the flood of miseries whereby Europe is overwhelmed. Let us practice those political, moral and religious virtues, which exalt a nation. Let us shun the contagion of French influence, and of all foreign influence, with as much vigilance and dread as we should shun the touch of the hand of death. And then, "in the name of our God, we might shut up our banners, and bid defiance to the arm of flesh how potent soever, that should offer to assail us."

From the Boston Repertory.

The question of the reception of Mr. Onís as representative of the Spanish provisional government, appears to us really to be attended with perplexing circumstances. We must confess that we cannot see the arguments in favor of his being recognised by our government in so strong a light, as some of our friends. While there was any probability that Spain could or would maintain her independence against the usurper, we owed, both on the scale of gratitude and as a nation concerned in the great cause of the freedom of nations, all the aid and countenance we could bestow. But if it is morally certain the government from which Mr. Onís derives his official character will soon be swept away, do what you please in its favor, what can be the great advantage of forming connections which must be but momentary? It is said the colonies of Spain, which will disdain to submit to the tyrant, will consider the refusal to receive Mr. Onís as an affront, and that our property within their jurisdiction may be endangered. We cannot pretend to predict as to their measures; but we do not see under existing prospects of the mother country, that such a construction can fairly be insisted upon. The colonies it is certain may, if they choose, remain perfectly independent of Bonaparte. If they declare independence or attach themselves to any other government, and we recognise them in the character they may choose, what more can they can require?

But as we have already observed, this is a question of a complicated nature. We do not venture to offer a decided opinion as to the course that ought to be pursued; nor do we see the conclusiveness of the reasons which have been offered in favor of recognizing a minister from the Seville Junta.

The above was in type for last Friday's Repertory, before we knew what policy Mr. Madison would adopt; and we cannot yet see that his declining to receive Mr. Onís is unjustifiable, or that the Spanish colonies can, with propriety, consider it a cause of offence. It is not improbable that were Mr. Onís now to embark for Spain he would find the government by which he was commissioned destroyed. The most active in the struggle, if any have conducted so as to deserve that character, will undoubtedly emigrate to South America, which in all probability will declare itself independent, and may remain so in spite of the conqueror and despot of Europe. If South America, should send a minister to the U. States, we trust an acknowledgement of their independence, a recognition of their representative, and a disposition to establish a friendly intercourse would be the consequence.

If during the American revolution, the patriots of the confederated states had manifested a general apathy to the cause of independence, or but a few sections displayed the zeal and valor of men determined to conquer or die; if we had left the French to sustain the brunt of the battle, and suffered them to starve or embark for Europe and leave us to our fate—if by such conduct we had rendered our cause, to all human appearance, forlorn and hopeless, would Spain, Holland or any other European power have thought it politic, or incumbent on them, to receive ministers from us? We believe not.

It may be our view of this subject is incorrect; but it appears to us, while we keep up a friendly commercial intercourse with the free part of Spain, and in this way do them all the positive good in our power, that under their present circumstances they can insist on no more; and that the non-reception of Mr. Onís offers no barrier to a good and friendly understanding with the future independent empires of Spanish South America, Cuba, or Mexico, as soon as they assume that character.

LONDON, October 1.

Mr. Denon, the well-known writer of Travels through Egypt, has lately been entrusted by Bonaparte with a considerable sum of money, to be equally divided among the authors of twelve paintings of large dimensions, on the following given subjects:

- 1st. Bonaparte addressing the Bavarians before the battle of Abensberg.
- 2d. The attack of the bridge at Ratisbon.
- 3d. The capture of Ratisbon.

4th. The attack of the bridge at Landshut.

5th. The bombardment of Vienna.

6th. The attack of the bridge at Ebersburg.

7th. The battle of Wagram.

8th. The French emperor's bivouac, on the field of Wagram, during the night of the 5th and 6th July.

9th. A view of the island Napoleon (Isle de Lobou) at the time when his imperial majesty re-entered it after the battle of Eylau.

10th. A second view of the island when Napoleon embraces marshal Lasnes mortally wounded in that battle.

11th. A view of Ebersdorf, and the bridge over the Danube.

12th. A view of the gardens of the palace of Schoenbrunn.

A small number of marble busts, and among others one of marshal Lasnes will also be executed by skilful French sculptors. The celebrated Canova, who is to receive 100,000 crowns for a colossal statue of Napoleon in bronze, has engaged the assistance of the German artists at Vienna, who cast the statue of Joseph II under the direction of the celebrated professor Zauner.

The triumphal arch erected in the Carrousal at Paris, by order of Bonaparte to immortalize the glory of the French arms, is now entirely finished. It faces the Tuilleries on one side, in the direction of the Vestibule, and the Louvre on the other. It is 45 feet in height, 60 in length, and 20 1/2 in thickness.

LETTER FROM HIS MAJESTY THE EMPEROR AND KING.

"Count de Hontbourg, our Minister of War,

"The reports that are before us contain the following assertions—that the governor of Flushing did not execute the order we gave him to cut the dikes and inundate Walcheren, as soon as a superior force of the enemy had debarked on the island—that he surrendered the place we confided to him, before the enemy had passed the Dike—the rampart being without a practicable breach, and untouched, of course, therefore, without having sustained an assault, and even when the trenches of the enemy were 150 toises from the place, and when we had 4000 men still under arms; that in fine, the place surrendered by the effect of a first bombardment.—If such be the fact, the governor would be culpable, and it will remain to be seen, whether we ought to attribute his conduct to reason or cowardice.

"We write you this letter in order that, as soon as you have received it, you may assemble a Council of Enquiry, composed of count Abville, count Rampon, vice-admiral Thevenard, and count Sorgie.—All the papers which may be in your office, the marine, interior, police, or any other department, relative to the surrender of Flushing, shall be sent to the Council, to be submitted to our inspection, with the result of said enquiry.

"Given at our camp at Schoenbrunn, September 7, 1809.

JUST RECEIVED,

For sale only by JAMES KENNEDY, Sen King street,

The following highly valuable Medicines,

Price 3 dollars per Bottle.

Dr. Jebb's Nature's Restorative

A BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

THIS cordial so justly celebrated throughout Great-Britain and the continent of Europe, for its superior efficacy in the curing all disorders excited by nervous irritability as well as in complaints of complete debility, whether arising from irregularities of living, long continued residence in warm climates, immoderate pursuits of excessive pleasure, or that destructive habit of inconsiderate youth which brings on so prematurely the infirmities of old age.

In removing pulmonary affections, asthma and all disorders of the lungs, it is the most powerful remedy ever yet found, and the relief it has afforded even in the last stage of consumptions, is without a parallel; with regard to its efficacy in this baneful, and unfortunately the prevailing disorder in this country (consumption) its superiority is such as to have supplanted every other medicine.

Those who in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, will find themselves restored to health and strength, and all those melancholy symptoms removed, which are the general effects of such causes.

In short, animated by the uniform success this invaluable cordial has experienced in Europe, the thousands it has renovated, when bending under the pressure of nervous, consumptive or hypochondriacal disorders (many tested proofs of which from eminently distinguished persons in this quarter of the globe, are now in the possession of the proprietor here, some few of which are herein published have determined the introduction of it into this continent, where its efficacy must soon become so prized as to make it considered a beneficent remedy not to be dispensed with by those who are anxious to preserve or acquire their health.

The chief ingredient of this cordial is a plant whose rare and precious salutary virtues were well known to the Arabians during the 8th and 9th centuries, when that people shone conspicuous over all the nations of the world for their learning and skill in eradicating baneful diseases incident to the human frame, renovating infirmity to vigor, and restoring the sickly to sound and rosy health, and which, as known at this time by their descendants, and used and experienced as the most sovereign remedy for decayed constitutions, and every species of nervous disorders. This celebrated restorative plant has also been highly estimated for ages past, amongst the most enlightened nations of Greece, and considered by those wise inhabitants as one of the first of their blessings.

This cordial is also rich and fine in flavor most grateful to the palate, and the most enlivening to the spirits of any yet offered to the public.

Dr. Tissot's celebrated Gout and Rheumatic Drops

(Price, Two Dollars per bottle.)

NOTHING is of more importance than the preservation of health—this common laudable remark however is too often forgotten whilst we are active and strong—and prevention of pain, which is superior to its cure, is not sufficiently attended to by any description of persons. Among those disorders which require the most early and unremitting efforts to eradicate and overcome, none have a stronger claim upon our notice than the Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Weakness of the Joints, Sprains, Glands, the Stone and Gravel, the Cramp and every species of Rheumatic Pains from whatever cause they may have originated—and hence every relief which can be administered is too valuable to be forgotten. Those persons whose avocations peculiarly expose them to colds, &c. cannot be too anxious always to possess immediate aid. Sea-faring persons, travellers, &c. ought constantly to carry with them that medicine which will counteract the unpleasant effects of their perilous duties, and especially those pains to which their situation must expose them. To those who reside in or visit the West-Indies, and their warm climates, they will be found upon trial to convey the most lasting service and will gradually destroy all tendency to disease in the human frame, and preserve health and vigor. Although a great variety of prescriptions have been published to cure the disorders enumerated above, none has yet equalled the GOUT AND RHEUMATIC DROPS of Dr. TISSOT, which are celebrated throughout the European continent, and whose unbounded benefits are fully authenticated by certificates already published of gentlemen so well known in America, being of the first consequence in the state of Maryland: General Charles Ridgely, of Hampton; John Gibson, Esq. one of the directors of the Farmers' Bank of Maryland; John Macubbin, Esq. Mrs. Macubbin, his wife; and Mrs. Ryan, of Calton. Ample certificates and affidavits of the beneficial effects of these medicines may be seen by applying as above.

New House of Entertainment.

THOMAS RHODES, respectfully informs the citizens of Alexandria and the public, that he will open a House of Entertainment on the first day of July next, in a commodious and airy new house on Prince-street, sign of the Eagle, a few doors above Thomas Swann's dwelling. He intends to keep a constant supply of the best LIQUORS and PROVISIONS, and will accommodate travellers and others on such moderate terms as to make it an object to call on him. He will be provided with a careful hostler and has good stabling for horses. The situation is superior to any other in town for the accommodation of travellers, it being out of the way of bustle and noise, and of the best water at the door.
